Newsletter August 2011

The Whitehawk 33rd Annual Antique Indian Art show, the oldest antique American Indian show, will be opening in a few days in Santa Fe. We want to give our loyal collectors first opportunity to see several great works of American Indian art that are newly available and that we will be featuring at this show. There are, of course, many other items that we will be offering for sale for the first time, including vintage Native American jewelry and Taxco jewelry, kachina dolls, Navajo textiles, and sub-Arctic objects.

If you would like additional information and prices of any of these items or to learn more about what else we will be showing at Whitehawk, please feel free to contact us by telephone or email.

Also, of course, be sure to check for new entries at:

This black-on-red Hopi bowl exemplifies the talent of both Nampeyo and her daughter Annie Healing. The bowl is sculptural in form, with a beautiful turn to the rim that is characteristic of Nampeyo's work. The finely painted realistic bird, with brilliant use of white along with terrific design and proportion, is more characteristic of Annie's work.

This is a rare opportunity to own a masterpiece by both Nampeyo and Annie.

Penn Museum Exhibits

In recognition of the 50th Anniversary of the Philadelphia Antiques Show, we want to highlight the Penn Museum (formerly known as the University of Pennsylvania Museum of Archaeology and Anthropology) and its exhibits. Be sure to visit while you are in Philadelphia for the Philadelphia Antiques Show.

 As many of you know, Marcy volunteered for 15 years in the Museum's American Indian Section and helped with the inventory of the Native American collections. Internationally famous for the depth of their Native American objects, it is well worth a visit. A link to their Southwest Gallery: Living in Balance: The Native American Southwest
